

General Fiction

BOOK AWARDS

Book Sense Award

<http://www.bookweb.org/btw/awards>

This award was formerly known as the ABBY Award but changed to the Book Sense award in 2000. Independent booksellers vote for the titles they most enjoyed handselling to their customers during the previous year.

2008 Winner: A Thousand Splendid Suns
by Khaled Hosseini

The Man Booker Prize

<http://www.themanbookerprize.com>

Booker McConnell, a multinational conglomerate company, finances this award. It is given annually for the best full length novel by an author from the UK, a Commonwealth, or South Africa. In 2002 it became known as the Man Booker Award.

2009 Winner: Alice Munro

National Book Award

<http://www.nationalbook.org>

A consortium of book publishing groups gives this award annually for the best fiction in the United States. This award was established in 1950.

2008 Winner: Shadow Country
by Peter Matthiessen

National Book Critics Circle

<http://www.bookcritics.org>

A panel of critics and authors give this award annually in five different categories, fiction being one of them. This award was established in 1974.

2008 Winner: 2666
by Roberto Bolaño

General Fiction

BOOK AWARDS

Book Sense Award

<http://www.bookweb.org/btw/awards>

This award was formerly known as the ABBY Award but changed to the Book Sense award in 2000. Independent booksellers vote for the titles they most enjoyed handselling to their customers during the previous year.

2008 Winner: A Thousand Splendid Suns
by Khaled Hosseini

The Man Booker Prize

<http://www.themanbookerprize.com>

Booker McConnell, a multinational conglomerate company, finances this award. It is given annually for the best full length novel by an author from the UK, a Commonwealth, or South Africa. In 2002 it became known as the Man Booker Award.

2009 Winner: Alice Munro

National Book Award

<http://www.nationalbook.org>

A consortium of book publishing groups gives this award annually for the best fiction in the United States. This award was established in 1950.

2008 Winner: Shadow Country
by Peter Matthiessen

National Book Critics Circle

<http://www.bookcritics.org>

A panel of critics and authors give this award annually in five different categories, fiction being one of them. This award was established in 1974.

2008 Winner: 2666
by Roberto Bolaño

General Fiction

BOOK AWARDS

Book Sense Award

<http://www.bookweb.org/btw/awards>

This award was formerly known as the ABBY Award but changed to the Book Sense award in 2000. Independent booksellers vote for the titles they most enjoyed handselling to their customers during the previous year.

2008 Winner: A Thousand Splendid Suns
by Khaled Hosseini

The Man Booker Prize

<http://www.themanbookerprize.com>

Booker McConnell, a multinational conglomerate company, finances this award. It is given annually for the best full length novel by an author from the UK, a Commonwealth, or South Africa. In 2002 it became known as the Man Booker Award.

2009 Winner: Alice Munro

National Book Award

<http://www.nationalbook.org>

A consortium of book publishing groups gives this award annually for the best fiction in the United States. This award was established in 1950.

2008 Winner: Shadow Country
by Peter Matthiessen

National Book Critics Circle

<http://www.bookcritics.org>

A panel of critics and authors give this award annually in five different categories, fiction being one of them. This award was established in 1974.

2008 Winner: 2666
by Roberto Bolaño

Nobel Prize

<http://nobelprize.org>

A series of annual awards provided for by the will of Alfred Nobel, which recognizes outstanding contributions for the benefit of mankind in six areas. For literature, the prize is for the author's entire body of work.

2008 Winner: Jean-Marie Gustave Le Clézio

PEN/Faulkner Award

<http://www.penfaulkner.org>

This award was founded in 1980 by writers to honor their peers and is now the largest juried award for fiction in the U.S. It is named in honor of William Faulkner, who used his Nobel Prize funds to create an award for young writers.

2009 Winner: Netherland
by Joseph O'Neill

Pulitzer Prize for Literature

<http://www.pulitzer.org>

Awarded annually since 1917 and named for newspaper publisher Joseph Pulitzer. The Fiction Award is given annually for fiction in book form by an American author and preferably dealing with American life.

2009 Winner: Olive Kitteridge
by Elizabeth Strout

6/09 amm

PROVO CITY
LIBRARY AT
Academy Square

550 North University Avenue, Provo, UT 84601-1618

www.provocitylibrary.com

801-852-6650

Nobel Prize

<http://nobelprize.org>

A series of annual awards provided for by the will of Alfred Nobel, which recognizes outstanding contributions for the benefit of mankind in six areas. For literature, the prize is for the author's entire body of work.

2008 Winner: Jean-Marie Gustave Le Clézio

PEN/Faulkner Award

<http://www.penfaulkner.org>

This award was founded in 1980 by writers to honor their peers and is now the largest juried award for fiction in the U.S. It is named in honor of William Faulkner, who used his Nobel Prize funds to create an award for young writers.

2009 Winner: Netherland
by Joseph O'Neill

Pulitzer Prize for Literature

<http://www.pulitzer.org>

Awarded annually since 1917 and named for newspaper publisher Joseph Pulitzer. The Fiction Award is given annually for fiction in book form by an American author and preferably dealing with American life.

2009 Winner: Olive Kitteridge
by Elizabeth Strout

6/09 amm

PROVO CITY
LIBRARY AT
Academy Square

550 North University Avenue, Provo, UT 84601-1618

www.provocitylibrary.com

801-852-6650

Nobel Prize

<http://nobelprize.org>

A series of annual awards provided for by the will of Alfred Nobel, which recognizes outstanding contributions for the benefit of mankind in six areas. For literature, the prize is for the author's entire body of work.

2008 Winner: Jean-Marie Gustave Le Clézio

PEN/Faulkner Award

<http://www.penfaulkner.org>

This award was founded in 1980 by writers to honor their peers and is now the largest juried award for fiction in the U.S. It is named in honor of William Faulkner, who used his Nobel Prize funds to create an award for young writers.

2009 Winner: Netherland
by Joseph O'Neill

Pulitzer Prize for Literature

<http://www.pulitzer.org>

Awarded annually since 1917 and named for newspaper publisher Joseph Pulitzer. The Fiction Award is given annually for fiction in book form by an American author and preferably dealing with American life.

2009 Winner: Olive Kitteridge
by Elizabeth Strout

6/09 amm

PROVO CITY
LIBRARY AT
Academy Square

550 North University Avenue, Provo, UT 84601-1618

www.provocitylibrary.com

801-852-6650